Mr. Conklin and the custodian staff helped maintain a pleasant atmosphere at Notre Dame by caring for both the grounds and the building itself.

behind the scenes

Our kitchen staff met a challenging job well, by catering to the reknowned appetites of the Notre Dame student "body."

They Know You're Really a Freshman When.....

They know you're really a freshman when... you lose count of how many times you trip on the stairs each day.

They know you're really a freshman when... you still think Mrs. Martinez is mean and scary

They know you're really a freshman when... you don't know everyone in your class, so you walk up to Mrs. Kolbisen and ask her if she wants to cut P.E. with you.

They know you're really a freshman when... you ask a junior for directions to room 121, and end up at the college chapel.

They know you're really a freshman when...
you describe "Merchant of Venice" as one of those books that, once you pick up, you can't put down.

They know you're really a freshman when... you find out in religion class that there never really was an Adam and Eve, and you wonder how you got here.

They know you're really a freshman when...
you think it's cool to wear your blouse untucked.

They know you're really a freshman when... you think the "cool cliques" are the sounds you hear when Sister Johanne is coming on a cold day.

They know you're really a freshman when... you and your friends flock to a Notre Dame dance to hear "Stanley and the Swingers" play.

They know you're really a freshman when... you knock on the Executive Council door, and run away.

They know you're really a freshman when...
you try the Penny Trick on the new phones.

They know you're really a freshman when...
you buy a bathroom pass from one of the sophomores, and find out later that you never really needed one.

They know you're really a freshman when... you join the camera club because Mr. Schulte is president.

They know you're really a freshman when... you walk into the Student Lounge and ask, "Is this the gym?"

They know you're really a freshman when... you have to bring in some magazines for religion, and you bring in your old copies of "16".

They know you're really a freshman when...
you think having the Tigers for school mascot is sexy.

They know you're really a freshman when... you're the only one in the school that still wears "Deadly White" lipstick.

They know you're really a freshman when...
you walk into the infirmary and ask for Sister Pugh.

They know you're really a freshman when...
the only reason you go out to the West Lawn is to get some air.

They know you're really a freshman when... you gain ten pounds in your first semester at Notre Dame.

They know you're really a freshman when... your idea of a Big Sister is a nun that's six feet tall and weighs three hundred pounds.

i see you
i smile tenderly
when i see you smile
i laugh softly
when i see you laugh
i scream
when i see you in pain
and i live each day for you
i see you
a warm happy feeling comes upon me
i want to tell the whole world what is written in my heart
i see you
and i cry
because i know
you are not mine
to love.

View Point

Well, I have seen forever.
It is not much...
it is white, and cold
it burns your lungs, and puts tears in your eyes.
It is icy, and surrounded by mist.

It looks very much like Eternity looked.
(I have only seen it once, and that was some time ago.)

It is hard to get to a place from which forever may be viewed.
The journey requires much determination, stamina, and common sense.

I am here.
I have reached the lookout from which forever may be seen.

I am not sure the trip was worth all the trouble, though...

From where I stand, forever looks wornout...and old,
rather like a house in need of paint.

Forever is not much.
It looked much nicer from the ground.

The Suicide of a Shattered Mind

Broken panes
in a shattered room
flowing wind
with a broken tune

Windowsills dry
and shredded shattered glass
beside an empty bed

Broken windows and a corner stove infested with flames eating four cracked walls and one single door

And one lonely being aged with strife
watches the mastery of the flame murder her house
and her life

Broken windows
and a shattered mind
once both were useful
now distorted and blind

Margaret Ingram '73

The Plant
He was planted, but only then
He had begun, near now, but then.
He has grown beauty now, not then.
If his colors were ever given, he kept them till now

Now there is glory and splendor and the oh so cruel battle is finished.

He is now, and only then was.
He should be now, and never then.
He will be undone soon, but not now.
If he will be gone, all his colors will be used.

Then there will be no glory or splendor, for a more cruel and harsh struggle has begun.

He was planted
He is grown
He will die.
Pattie Eames '73

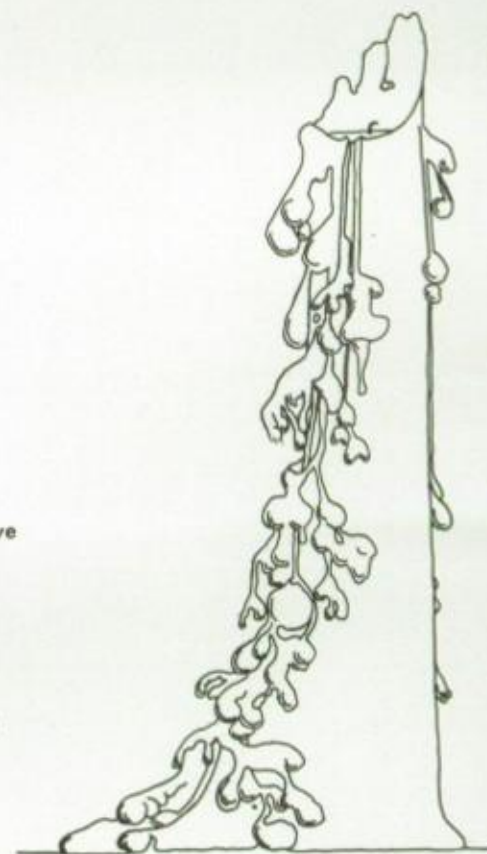

LOGIC TO LIFE

It seems strange that we should lose innocence instead of gaining it as we age;
learning life
should purify it of confusion and reduce it
to a simplicity we can know.
But that real reduction leaves just ash
and some men glad to die, and some old men children again-- blank and strange as a new born child.

II

There is but one logic to life --
the wish for more.
It has some sense
if it means enough
to continue forever
to last at all.

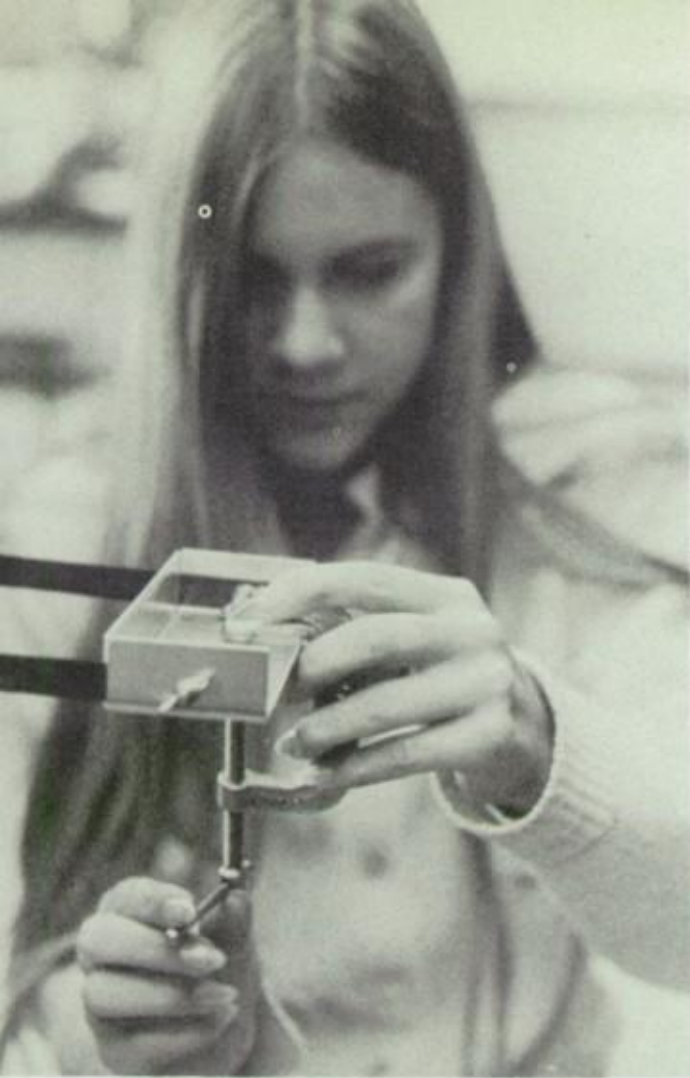

Joan Young '72

i watched you walk through the glimmering sunlight... up up
i saw the gentle bobbing and and and ar@ down down
of your eversoglowing hair

i smiled
as you walked
and my eyes kissed your soul and forever was never till now
